„Recreating woodlands in the Culm Moor Nature Reserve, UK shows how local actions can impact global targets to tackle biodiversity loss and remove carbon from the atmosphere. The project pays close attention to creating a resilient forest that will support a diversity of plant and animal life, while increasing local awareness of biodiversity.“

Project information
Culm Moor Woodland Reserve

Culm Moor Nature Reserve are what Creating Tomorrow's Forests are all about - using their expertise to create diverse, native, thriving woodland as a home for UK wildlife with benefits for people. In this case, a beautiful woodland is being developed on an unused dairy farm located within the North Devon Biosphere Reserve. The woodland will connect into existing woodland fragments to create a contiguous native broadleaved forest where the veteran trees will nurture the growing saplings. The habitat is perfect to carve a space for local birds, pollinators, mammals, lichen and moss communities.
